2005 Season In Review

This season marked our 35th year as an annual reunion of former islanders, and our 17th year as a formally chartered nonprofit organization.

The reunion is as old as the Lakeshore itself. The whole idea in the beginning was to bring former islanders together once each year, to renew acquaintances, nourish long-time friendships and keep in touch with shirttail relatives (almost everyone was related in some way.)

Seventeen years went by, during which the Lakeshore bought up most of the property on the islands. Although the main cemetery on South Manitou was officially still owned by Glen Arbor Township, nobody had been caring for the place, and the years had taken their toll. The fence was down, and nature was encroaching, with junipers, sumacs and young maples rapidly reclaiming the property. At that point, the reunion group decided to take on the project of perpetually caring for the cemetery where so many of their relatives lay buried. This was our first cooperative venture with the Lakeshore, which then took title to the property. In 1989 we voted to organize more formally as a nonprofit "South Manitou Cemetery Association".

Born about the same time as the National Lakeshore, many of our original members, if not all, were caught up in the trials and tribulations that attended the creation of the Park, and the acquisition of property that had been held in some families since originally homesteaded by their immigrant ancestors. It is no secret that our relations with the Park were initially somewhat strained.

But time heals all wounds, and over the intervening years attitudes adjusted, on both sides. We've grown in numbers, and as our mission broadened we became the "South Manitou Memorial Society", then the "Manitou Islands Memorial Society". We're now best described as a special "Friends of the Park" group; one with a particular focus ... the Lakeshore's "Islands Unit". Meanwhile, the National Park Service in general, and the Lakeshore in particular, has developed a very felicitous spirit towards working with partners. This season's success is a testament to what can be accomplished when everyone's hearts are in the right place.

In celebration of that spirit, here's a summary of this year's activities and accomplishments ...

South Manitou Island Schoolhouse Preservation Project

This was our most ambitious undertaking for the season. Built in 1899, the homely little schoolhouse served island families for over a half century, not only educating their children, but also as a gathering place for meetings and social activities. It is one of South Manitou's most enduring landmarks. Like most other structures on the island, it had seriously deteriorated from abandonment. After taking over the island, the Lakeshore saved the structure from further damage through stabilization projects, and NPS volunteers did what they could from time to time to improve its appearance.

In a cooperative effort, the Memorial Society teamed up with the Lakeshore to finally restore the schoolhouse over the 2005 and 2006 seasons. The Memorial Society is funding the project and providing volunteer teams, while the Lakeshore is providing transportation, housing, technical direction and logistical support. The plan is to bring the place back to the condition it was in at the time of its closing, in the 1930's. Interpretive displays will be added, with the hope of opening this place as a featured attraction on island motor tours.

Gwen Glatz, long-time MIMS member and former NPS "VIP" (Volunteers in Parks), organized and headed up three separate workshops in late June, July and August, involving some twenty volunteers. These groups have succeeded in removing all of the remaining plaster and lathe and replacing it with new wallboard, repairing rotted sections in the hardwood floor, repairing chimney stack fittings, and generally cleaning and organizing the interior of the building. They're well on their way to accomplishing the goal of completing the project by the close of the 2006 season!

Cemetery Maintenance Projects

Ever true to our original founders' agenda, MIMS volunteers completed several cemetery-related projects. Two new crosses were erected on unmarked graves in North Manitou's cemetery. Routine maintenance was accomplished at the main cemetery on South, and two new headstones were placed on legendary "Unknown" graves near its main entrance (see photo on page 1).

The little cemetery near South Manitou's old dock was also spruced up, and MIMS volunteers helped install new staves, which were custom-made by the Lakeshore, in the antique fences surrounding some of the burial sites.

Haas Shanty Restoration

The picturesque, but dilapidated, structure behind the Harrison Haas house (Jenks/Hughes cottage), has been completely restored. The original purpose of the little building, which appeared to be two separate shanties that were merged at some time or another, remains a mystery.

Material for this project was provided from one of the Lakeshore's CCC forests, specially milled by Dan Zezulka of Karlin (near Interlochen), then transported to the island aboard the Namaha, the Lakeshore's 41-foot Munson landing craft. The Memorial Society granted the funds to pay for the milling and provided volunteers to help with the project.

Four-Way "Partnership" Restores the Conrad Hutzler Chicken Coop and Clears Landscapes

The Michigan Historical Center, the Lakeshore, Preserve Historic Sleeping Bear and MIMS joined forces to accomplish some much-needed work on South Manitou Island. PHSB received an $8,000 preservation-interpretation award from MHC in April. The 50% match was provided, in part, by $3,400 from the Memorial Society, making a total of $12,000 available to these island projects. The work was accomplished by PHSB staff and volunteers, with the Lakeshore supervising, providing logistical support and furnishing equipment. The chicken coop on the Conrad Hutzler farm had pretty much "had it". There really wasn't much to work with. The structure was unsound, many of the boards that had been part of it lay on the ground, buried in the overgrowth; its prospects were "discouraging", at best. Undaunted, PHSB arrived with blueprints in hand, cleared several years of encroaching vegetation, and in a single weekend restored the building to its former glory.

At the same time, others were laboring to recover old farm fields, or "agricultural landscapes", in the farm loop, and along the route to the Theodore Beck farmstead, better known to some as "The Lodge".

Perhaps Mother Nature sometimes doesn't like to be messed with. PHSB Project Coordinator Michael Matts reports that she awarded liberal doses of poison ivy, all due protective precautions notwithstanding.

Annual Reunion/Meeting & Island Excursion

The "high point" of our season happens each year on the last weekend in July. Participation in this year's reunion and annual meeting was reminiscent of "the old days", with some seventy-nine people in attendance, the best turn-out in many years.

The reunion provides an opportunity for everyone to renew old acquaintances, and make new friends. Members brought collections of photographs and other memorabilia to share, and Barbara Seipker, Laura Quackenbush, and members of the Leelanau Historical Society, were on hand to scan those items and convert them to digital form. Some may be featured in one of Barbara's new books. A large collection was also donated to LHS to be come part of the permanent collection. (LHS is our official "collection agent".) Shown here are the most senior members who came to this year's gathering.

Highlights of the annual meeting included two special presentations ... to this year's winner of the Gerald E Crowner

Photo: MIMS

Memorial Scholarship, Molly Maxbauer, and a Special Achievement award to Christopher Ek for his hand-made model of the South Manitou Island Lighthouse. Molly's essay, which appeared in the "Summer" issue, told about the importance of the Manitou Passage in Great Lakes maritime history. Chris's model of the lighthouse, originally begun as a school project, was brought to our attention by his Grandmother, Suzanne Hughes. It is now on display in the Island's Visitor Center.

Notable at this year's events was the presence of all ages, sometimes representing three and four generations in the same family! Every sixth person at the Empire events was a child or teenager, and the number of youthful participants on the island the following day was even greater. Most took home a special souvenir ... a specially monogrammed wooden whistle, handmade especially for this occasion and donated by Leon Kelderhouse, a genuine "son of Port Oneida".

The annual South Manitou Island Excursion drew a record-breaking crowd this year, with fifty-eight people coming along for the ride. This year's crossing was the roughest ever! There were lots of ashen faces, and the Mishe Mokwa's crew was kept busy passing out baggies. (The transparent bags were a big hit with some of the kids!)

Once back on solid ground, stomachs soon settled as everyone enjoyed a catered picnic lunch on the lawns around the old Coast Guard Lifesaving Station. The entourage then repaired to the island's main cemetery for the annual "All Saints" memorial service. This year the bell rang for ...

Participating in this year's observance were Rev Kirby D Smith, of Lansing's Westminster Presbyterian Church, Gwen Glatz of Muskegon, who played traditional hymns, bell-ringers Matt and Philip Champion of Kalamazoo, and Patty Kelly of Holt, who read an excerpt from John Donne's centuries old meditation Devotions upon Emergent Occasions ("And therefore never send to know for whom the bells tolls; it tolls for thee.").

Free motor tours were provided again this year, taking visitors around the farm loop, and to the schoolhouse where everyone was invited to inspect the progress our "Blue Shirts" had made during the June and July workshops. Even with much work left to be done at that point, the place hadn't looked as good for many years ... clean and neatly organized, and clearly on the way to "bigger and better things"!

As a special treat, the Lakeshore opened the freshly re-pointed and repainted lighthouse for the first time this season.

Narrated tours to the top of the tower's 117 steps were provided by MIMS members and professional NPS VIP's Patty Kelly and Lynette Holloway.

an interesting draw for boys and girls alike. An assortment of other games, "brain teasers" and activities were also featured.

Of all the remaining structures on South Manitou, "The Lodge" (see also the article on the last page) is one of the most sentimental favorites. Some say this particular venue offers the finest scenic vista on the Manitou Passage. The farmhouse, built in the 1870's, was originally the home of Theodore and Alvina Beck, who operated a very productive farm at the site. He died in 1910; she continued to operate the farm on her own until her death over thirty years later. In 1947 place was purchased by J Lee Barrett of Detroit, with the intention of turning it into a resort. He converted the old farmhouse into a residence for his guests. Hence the name "the Lodge".

As our final project for the season, Paul and Mike Rocheleau assembled a team of skilled tradesmen, rounded up an assortment of mostly donated materials, and spent a weekend intensively working to again stabilize this structure.

Port Oneida Fair

In our second season, the theme of our exhibit, "Old Time Pastimes", proved to be a hit for both young and old. The simple barnyard game Ash Can Ball seemed especially intriguing to "boys" of college age and up, who evidently expect challenges to come in much more "hi-tech" packages. Lynn Roe offered doll-making/repairing demonstrations, featuring the classic Raggedy Ann and Andy, which proved

The annual Port Oneida Fair billed as its Celebration of Rowing to be one of the Lakeshore's great success stories. It's free and great family entertainment for a warm August afternoon in the country.

The Memorial Society has been invited to participate as one of the official "partners" for the 2006 edition, which involves assisting with the tasks of organizing and promoting the event, an overture the Board has proudly accepted

"Thank You" Manitou Island Transit

The generosity and willing support of Manitou Island Transit ... Mike Grosvenor, Michael and Sarah Grosvenor, and Jimmy and Megan Muñoz ... figured into almost every one of the above projects and events.

For the better part of the season, the Lakeshore's "landing craft" vessel was out of commission with an obstinate and difficult fuel injection problem, so the necessity of transporting materials and supplies to the island on schedule was always a perplexing uncertainty. MIT went way beyond the call in accepting deliveries of materials, allowing shipments to be staged at their dock, and transporting them without charge aboard the Mishe Mokwa along with our volunteers. Moreover, our volunteers were permitted the use of MIT's trucks to transport materials and supplies on the island, MIT being reluctant to accept even a "thank you", let alone reimbursement for the fuel used.

These friends were also very generous in helping make the annual island excursion a big success, by assisting with parking in Leland and permitting the use of their "dune buggy" fleet on the island at very reasonable rates. The Grosvenors are long-time Memorial Society members, and we are indeed fortunate to have their continuing support.

"Thank You" from Molly Maxbauer

Dear Members,

I would like to thank you all for the wonderful scholarship you have generously made possible for me.

As I embark on my college journey in Minnesota, I will always have a special place in my heart for Northern Michigan, more so now because of the wonderful history you all have shared with me.

Thank you again for your generosity.

*Sincerely
Molly Maxbauer*

Name the Newsletter

The newsletter has never had a name other than "Newsletter". The first issue was published over 16-years ago, on July 1, 1989. It took the form of personal letters, one written by Glenn Furst followed by another from Johanna DeKok. Glenn, who was our first President, talked about having spent the previous fifteen years doing what he could to preserve island burial sites, then finally tackling the island's main cemetery:

The cemetery had to be cleaned up. Trees 6" in diameter, juniper bushes, and Sumac 6' - 8' in height were growing everywhere. With a bulldozer, and a chainsaw, a 7 person work party, consisting of the Taylor family, Leslie Furst, N.P.S. Ranger, Pete LaValley, George Hutzler and myself, worked for a period of three days. Later, Fred Burdick organized a Youth Conservation Corps (Y.C.C.) group, sponsored by the N.P.S., to fill in sunken graves and make other improvements. The one acre plot once again looked like a cemetery.

Johanna, who was the Secretary/Treasurer, wrote about the progress being made in organizing the newly formed corporation, and its promise for the future:

The people who are buried on the Island have a story to tell, a story which must be preserved and retold. Some have toiled the Island's soil; other Islander's have lost their lives in the line of duty; some have otherwise contributed to the history of South Manitou Island. All deserve to be remembered, and they deserve to have their graves cared for.

The second issue, which appeared three and a half months later, featured an official masthead, specially designed by Glenn's son-in-law Anthony Schillizzi ... the one shown above. This designed served for over fourteen years, until March 2004, when the South Manitou Memorial Society became the Manitou Islands Memorial Society.

Tony simply called the publication the "Newsletter". That's what it has been called since. Is it time for more imagination? Here are some examples from other area nonprofits: "LeeMuse" from the Leelanau Historical Society & Museum, "The Clapboard" from Preserve Historic Sleeping Bear, "Drifting Sands" from the Friends of Sleeping Bear Dunes, and "View from the Dunes" from the Lakeshore itself.

Use the enclosed envelope to submit your ideas. The list of suggestions will be published in the Spring 2006 newsletter, and simultaneously on the manitouislands.org web site. The winner will be chosen by online vote, and announced in the Summer 2006 newsletter, which will be published under that new banner.

If you're the winner, you'll be awarded a handsome plaque at the next annual meeting. You and your family will also be invited to come along to South Manitou Island the following day, complements of the Memorial Society. 🏠

Hi Folks,

How nice to know someone is interested in reviving the "Crib". I lived on her the season of 1966, the year of the great November storm that broke down the sea door. I'll never forget that place, nor my good friend, now deceased, George "Red" Gauthier of Cedar who was the Chief at the time. I was the most old timers as "the Crib". On Wednesday, July 27th, MIMS board members and guests accompanied Coast Guard ATON personnel to the crib to inspect the structure. Onboard in addition to MIMS board members were Senfuss, representing Sen Debbie Stabenow's Traverse City office, Bob Zieman and his crewman from Mihm Enterprises, a contractor experienced in the restoration of offshore lighthouses, Rick Lahman, representing Leland's business group, and definitive lighthouse expert Terry Pepper. Two fast boats, one provided by MIMS member Richard Riker and the other by Mihm Enterprises, made the trip a rough, but short ride.

To nobody's surprise, the crib was found to be structurally sound, but otherwise is sad shape. A colony of cormorants have made their home here for several years, and it shows. However Bob Zieman judged the structure to be in better shape than the DeTour Reef Light, a project recently completed by Mihms. A "crib door" on this light will also facilitate boarding materials and workers, as well as future visitors.

An extensive set of photos, taken during the visit by expert photographer Terry Pepper can be viewed at www.manitouislands.org.

How much will the restoration project cost? Probably between one and two million. Board members will be attending a state-sponsored grants workshop in Traverse on the 11th of November.

Assistant Station Engineer, U.S. Coast Guard, U.S. Navy, U.S. Army Department and I was also a Federal Boarding Officer. 1966 was the year we converted from DC power to AC, and the good old air fog horn to the electronic fog horn. So, if you can call it lucky, I saw and lived in both worlds.

That place was something else I'll tell you, but it is a big part of my life and memories. They took our picture the day we departed that spring of 1966 as we were going out with George Grovner on his boat "The Manitou Isle" to open the crib for the season. One of the last times I was over that way, I talked to several business owners in the area and most of them had never even heard of the Crib. I was absolutely stunned! They didn't even know it was there. I wanted so much to go out there once more, to be back "home" for just a while. Maybe I'll have the opportunity yet.

Your organization was recently brought to my attention when a friend came to visit for the weekend and brought an article from the August 4 edition of the Leelanau Enterprise. Thank you all for what you are doing for the Crib. If there is anything I can do to help bring your efforts to fruition please let me know.

Sincerely, and May God Bless!

Seeing the South Manitou Light Again?

The South Manitou Island lighthouse was decommissioned in 1958, and has been dark ever since. The Lakeshore has been entertaining the idea of extensively restoring the historic light station, and as a "finishing touch", the Memorial Society is considering the possibility of restoring the beacon. That would involve the purchase of the necessary hardware and registering the light with the Coast Guard as a private aid to navigation. The system would be essentially the same as the fully automated one on the Crib, except South Manitou's would be a stationary steady white signal.

Complicating the initiative: (1) while fully automated, year-around operation is preferred by everyone, that presents a big challenge with respect to the necessary solar panels, and preserving the light's scenic integrity, and (2) the government's priorities keep shifting the Lakeshore's $2.1-million project farther and farther into the future ... to 2013 at the moment. Thoughts anyone?

William G Boales – the last "Mayor" of South Manitou

Dear Friends:

My good friend and brother-in-law, Tom Persing has sent to me a copy of your newsletter for the summer of 2005 and I'm gratified in knowing there are people, like yourselves, who put a value on preserving the past and are willing to make it happen. I trust the enclosed check and family scrapbook will be of help. Perhaps the following brief history of my personal experiences on the Manitou Islands in the 1940's and later will be of help in tracing development of the islands during this period.

After working as the office boy for the Detroit Convention and Tourist Bureau for two years, 1943 - 1944, I asked J. Lee Barrett, the executive and center of influence, if I couldn't find some summer work activity on a farm or resort, and away from the city so I could make a meaningful change for the summer. This was during war time and jobs were easy to get. As it turned out, his friend, Bill Angel, who owned North Manitou Island, the Detroit Leland Hotel and other important properties was open to hiring summer help for the cherry harvest on the island during that period. I was a city boy turned farmer overnight!

There were several farm families living on the island but no other kids. The Jamaican cherry pickers were some of the others on the site and stayed in lodges with bedding of ticking during the harvest. One of my jobs was loading and unloading lugs of cherries aboard Tracey's boat for shipment over to the Morgan cannery in Traverse City.

After the harvest, my father and J. Lee Barrett arrived to take me off the island, following the harvest, leaving the delivery of ice, clean up of the cattle barn and making hay to someone else. The mail boat stopped at South Manitou Island and while there they decided to investigate some property for sale owned by the Beck family. Augie Warner gave us one of his famous rides over the ruts of the island and we did our sightseeing and touring that most others would turn down. In any case we missed our return to Leland, opting for a bunk in a fisherman's shed near the dock. Late that afternoon, Paul Humphry's daughter (Paul was the mechanic on the big island) rode in on her horse to advise the Coast Guard on the death of one of the older island inhabitants. As it turned out, we were able to ride back to Frankfort courtesy of the C.O.

The war ended and I returned to two more years of high school, then college (MSU '51) and the Air Force tour in Texas and England. During this time Dad and Lee Barrett talked up the idea for owning the Beck farm with other members of Rotary in Detroit. They incorporated, and hosted various parties. In the meantime, Dad bought the Huzler farm, hired Ed and Esther Riker and spent several happy summers roughing it on South Manitou. (The poker game was over when the fuel ran out for the generator.)

Good luck with your activities on the Manitou Island projects.

August 26, 1948 – LELAND This is a tale of nostalgia. It is a story about J. Lee Barrett, Detroit's suave No. 1 ambassador and promoter of civic superlatives – manager of the Detroit Convention and Tourist Bureau, and his vacation retreat on South Island on Lake Michigan.

We viewed the distant outline of the Manitous, North and South, from a window of Detzer's print shop here at Leland. In the foreground are fishermen's weatherworn docks and shacks. A baldheaded man, bronze with tan, had set up his easel to paint. A family was having a picnic in the village park where a charcoal iron smelter once stood. Children were playing on the sandy shore, for the waters of Lake Michigan are numbing cold. Hundreds of gulls swarmed noisily about wood piling that line the narrow harbor entrance. Between this tranquil scene and the faint silhouette of South Manitou are 18 miles of blue water.

Tracy Grosvenor, mail boat skipper, knows the Manitous. His conversation about life on the islands was a pleasant relief from lingering troubled memories of teenage boys undergoing military training at Grayling

"Back in 1908, my father was a logger on North Manitou" said Tracy, at the wheel. "Before then, the island had a popular summer lodge for Chicago tourists. Many times the dining room served 100 people.

When the lumbermen came in 1908 for a second timber harvest, the tourists left. Years later the island was acquired by William R. Angel former President of the Continental Motor Company of Detroit and Muskegon, and Roger Sherman a Chicago attorney. They operate it now as a sportsmen's club and cherry farm."

We stopped at North Manitou to deliver parcels of food and to pick up two lugs of cherries for the Coast Guard. Thence we journeyed on to South Manitou, whose natural harbor, curved like a new moon, is praised by sailors as being the best on Lake Michigan.

The boat trip from Leland was slow, two hours and a half. August Warner, Deputy Sheriff, met us at the South Manitou dock. We climbed aboard his 1928 Model A Ford. The chugging ride up a neglected two mile trail was reminiscent of grandfather's time.

We paused at a rustic gate and then drove past an ancient barn to a small farmhouse. The Detroit publicist, usually immaculately attired, resembled a beachcomber. He introduced us to two of his associates in the Lee Island Company, Inc., which was financing the venture. William W. Slocum was reclining in a hammock. William G. Boales was busy preparing lunch in the farmhouse kitchen.

Yes, the Detroit promoter explained, everyone had been busy fixing up things. Union plumbers were forgetful you know, and the island was miles off the mainland. So the Detroit businessmen had been wielding a paint brush, hammering nails, sawing wood and installing plumbing. Gradually the farmhouse was being transformed into a snug lodge. The barn was to become a clubhouse.

A stones throw from the farmhouse was a beach of Lake Michigan strewn with driftwood. The lake breeze was invigorating. Wild raspberries grew nearby in profusion.

We beheld the farm scene with its happy city colony and we marveled at the zeal of these Detroiters who were reveling in the isolated pastoral simplicity of a half-century ago. No telephones, no automobile traffic, no factory or railroad whistles, no gadgets, no evening papers with black headlines. Yes, this could be an impelling attraction – man's protest against modern complex living.

Barrett smiled in contentment. South Manitou, Robinson Crusoe haven of nostalgia, had waited years for him. The Island was his answer, in complete reverse, to a promoter's prayer
